Gordie MacKeeman and his Rhythm Boys

Saturday evening,
November 7, 2015
7:30 pm LDSS MPR

With a slight bend of his knee, Gordie MacKeeman launches into a song. Guided by the sharp cuts of his fiddle, his crazy legs shake and twist with a laughing regard for physics. The whole time, his Rhythm Boys deliver sure-footed roots accompaniment. It's a joyful sight, breaking down the divide between the band and the audience. It is this spirit that Gordie MacKeeman & His Rhythm Boys set out to capture on their album, Pickin' 'n' Clickin'. Hailing from Prince Edward Island, The Rhythm Boys' exhilarating live show instantly enamors audiences with engaging, sometimes jaw-dropping, stagecraft and showmanship. With traditional bluegrass and roots music, bolstered by their stunning musicianship, the group is poised to take the world stage. The band features Gordie MacKeeman (fiddle, feet, and vocals), Mark Geddes (bass, drums, percussion, mandolin, and banjo), Thomas Webb (vocals, banjo, guitar, pedal steel guitar, and bass) and Peter Cann (vocals and guitar).

Cayla Brooke in “How Can I Keep from Singing?”

Thursday evening,
April 7, 2016
7:30 pm LDSS MPR

A.M. Holmes of Gabriola Island wrote this about Cayla's show: "Wow! I'd be at the dictionary for hours to find enough superlatives to praise Cayla Brooke's tribute to the extraordinary talent of Eva Cassidy. Ably assisted by the grooving Tom Pickett, Brooke took the audience on an unsentimental journey through Cassidy's tragically short life. From the first song Eva performed in public to her version of “Over the Rainbow”, the program illustrated the incredible and eclectic range of this impossible-to-pigeonhole singer. The singing was simply glorious, as was the backup band. Hands down, this was the best show I've ever seen at the festival. I can't be more superlative than that.”  (5 stars)
